The Final Reflection is a 1984 Star Trek tie-in novel by John M. Ford which emphasizes developments of Klingon language and culture. The novel provided the foundation for the FASA Star Trek role-playing game sourcebooks dealing with the Klingon elements of the game. Although not considered canon because of later developments in the Star Trek movies and TV series, the presentation of Klingon culture in this novel and Ford's 1987 follow-on, How Much for Just the Planet? is highly popular in ...

~~The Final Reflection - Wikipedia~~
'The Final Reflection' is serious, & told almost entirely from the perspective of Klingon orphan Vrenn as he progresses from a harsh gladiatorial training school through adoption by a senior Klingon admiral to distinguished service in the fleet, with his career taking a strange turn as he is required to escort a Federation diplomat to his homeworld & back, dealing with Federation machinations & meeting several well-known characters from the Star Trek canon.

The Prologue establishes that in its "current year", a book was published called The Final Reflection, by an author called J.M. Ford. This device was used in similar ways in Mudd's Angels, Strangers from the Sky and Star Trek: The Motion Picture. The main body of the novel is a work of historical fiction in-universe, with events told by Krenn to Tagore to Ford, and misremembered facts, artistic license and Starfleet classification potentially explaining any contradictions.
